

Occupational Therapy (MS)

Develop the Skills to Help People Maximize Their Independence

Our independence – our ability to do for ourselves – is something many of us take for granted. For some people, it’s a goal they strive toward every day. Discover the rewards that come from helping someone overcome their challenge to become more independent. Earn your Master’s in Occupational Therapy from Lewis University.

A Program to Help You Develop Your Skills

Designed to provide you with the skills to help people with developmental, physical, cognitive, psychological and sensory performance issues, this program will give you the opportunity to work with a wide range of ages and conditions in a variety of settings. That’s because our faculty are trained experts who are dedicated to preparing you to take on practice and leadership roles in the field of occupational therapy. Upon completion of the program, you’ll be able to:

- Describe delivery models and systems
- Communicate and work with professionals who provide care to individuals and populations
- Apply therapeutic methods to help people participate in meaningful life roles and occupations
- Plan occupation-based interventions to address performance issues in a variety of contexts and environments
- Apply occupational therapy theory and evidence to client care
- Promote the development of programs and services that ensure social and occupational justice

The 76 credit hour MSOT Program at Lewis University is a continuous, full-time, entry-level program designed to be completed over 7 consecutive semesters in 28 months. The classes run Monday through Friday between 8:00 AM and 5:00 PM.

Occupational Therapy (MS)

Admission Requirements

In order to be considered for admission into the MSOT program, ideal candidates meet the following requirements:

- Baccalaureate degree in any field from a regionally accredited institution of higher education. Preferred majors include psychology, sociology, exercise science, education and biology.
- GPA of 3.25 or better on a 4.0 scale.
- Prerequisite coursework with a grade of “C” or above in the following subjects within the last seven years: human anatomy and human physiology with lab, general psychology, developmental psychology, abnormal psychology, sociology and statistics. Cadaver lab experience and familiarity with medical terminology are recommended.
- GRE Score of 300 (150 each for the verbal and quantitative sections); writing score of 4 or above preferred.
- Minimum of 40 hours of volunteer or observation experience with an occupational therapist or occupational therapy assistant prior to application. More than one site recommended
- Three Letters of Recommendation. One must be from a supervisor in a work, internship or volunteer setting. The remaining two should be from professional and/or academic references.
- Application for admission submitted via the OT Centralized Application Service (OTCAS) and paid application fee.

A balance of applicant experiences, attributes, and academic performance will be evaluated. Applicants that do not meet the GPA or GRE requirements, but who demonstrate strengths in other areas, may be considered. Other areas evaluated based on the applicant’s OT CAS application include, but are not limited to: life experience, leadership experience, community service, written communication, service orientation, work experience, commitment to the Lewis University mission, research and scholarship experience, participation in extracurricular activities, and awards and recognitions.

The entry-level occupational therapy master’s degree program at Lewis University has applied for accreditation and has been granted Candidacy Status by the Accreditation Council for Occupational Therapy Education (ACOTE) of the American Occupational Therapy Association (AOTA). The program must have a pre-accreditation review, complete an on-site evaluation, and be granted Accreditation Status before its graduates will be eligible to sit for the national certification examination for the occupational therapist administered by the National Board for Certification in Occupational Therapy (NBCOT). After successful completion of this exam, the individual will be an Occupational Therapist, Registered (OTR). In addition, all states require licensure in order to practice; however, state licenses are usually based on the results of the NBCOT Certification Examination. Note that a felony conviction may affect a graduate’s ability to sit for the NBCOT certification examination or attain state licensure.

Graduation Requirements

To complete the MS in Occupational Therapy degree, a student must earn a minimum of 76 credit hours in the MSOT program of study.
